

Media Release
For immediate distribution

VOYAGER EXTENDING FREE OFFER FOR AUCKLANDERS

Voyager New Zealand Maritime Museum is extending its free entry for Aucklanders until the end of May, following high uptake throughout the month of April.

Voyager CEO Paul Evans says free entry offers form a key part of delivering value back to the ratepayers of the Auckland region.

“We’ve been delighted that so many Aucklanders have been able to discover the explorative spirit of our seafaring nation first hand, as a result of our free entry during April,” says Mr Evans.

“It was particularly pleasing to see so many children discovering stories of adventure and intrigue throughout the school holidays.”

Mr Evans says by extending the offer throughout May, he hopes even more people can take the time to develop an understanding of the huge role the sea has played in the creation of the Auckland region.

Provided they come with proof of address, Voyager will waive the galleries admission charge for Auckland region residents until 31 May. Please note, charges still apply for Voyager Live heritage vessel experiences and education and pre-booked groups, and the free admission is not valid in conjunction with any other offer.