

New Zealand Maritime Museum HUI TE ANANUI A TANGAROA

The Art of Guiding

Effective guiding reflects good communication and manaakitanga. The way we interact with visitors and the relationships we form impact directly on the way the world perceives Aotearoa New Zealand. The skills of guiding are transferable across all aspects of our working life.

The Art of Guiding is ideal for tourism and travel students, international students, and secondary students. We focus on the skills of guiding and most importantly confident communication.

Students will be challenged to deliver their own guided interpretation in the Museum galleries. They will have the opportunity to reflect on how these skills are essential and transferable.

Students will discover career options from the myriad of careers in the maritime tourism sector.

Programme overview:

- Workshop with Educator in the galleries giving students the opportunity to deliver their own presentation
- Gallery Exploration and time for presentation development
- Background information to support student's knowledge of objects or galleries.
- Bag storage and sheltered lunch area

Please talk to our Bookings Team about additional learning experiences including:

- Gallery Explorer self-guided trail through New Zealand Maritime Museum
- A sailing experience on the harbour on our heritage vessel Ted Ashby
